

Who are we ?

A band that makes you #HappyRightNow

THE INVISIBLE TUBA is what happens when eight musicians from Portugal, Venezuela, the USA, the UK, and Italy meet in Lisbon and decide the world needs to be #happyrightnow

With clarinet, banjo, trumpet, sax, trombone, bass, drums, and one fearless singer, they turn every gig into a party — mixing roaring hot jazz with cheeky stage antics.

Think 1920s New Orleans... dropped inside a circus.

Short-BIO

THE INVISIBLE TUBA is an 8-piece jazz joy machine powered by banjo (Tó Pacheco), singer (Laura Venturini), trumpet (Simon White), sax (Francisco Menezes), trombone (Iris Ceulemans), bass (Heriberto Rojas), drums (Pedro Gens), and a clarinet player (Ricardo Quintas) who refuses to behave.

Based in Lisbon but assembled from Portugal, Venezuela, the USA (Wisconsin!), the UK, and Italy, they serve up the irresistible swing of 1920s New Orleans — spiced with international flair and a dash of mischief.

Their concerts are equal parts music and mayhem: a tight horn section locking in on classic hot jazz riffs, a rhythm section that makes it impossible not to dance, and spontaneous bits of comedy that catch the audience off guard (and sometimes the band, too).

Whether in a grand theatre, a festival tent, or parading through the streets, THE INVISIBLE TUBA brings toe-tapping tunes, good-natured chaos, and just enough trouble to keep things interesting.
